Jenny Collins is a litigation attorney who focuses her practice on real estate, business, and bankruptcy litigation and counseling in both state and federal courts. The pursuit of stellar client service is the foundational cornerstone of her practice. She strives to produce outcomes from the litigation process that align with the business needs and goals of clients.

Before joining Wilson Cribbs + Goren, Jenny worked as an attorney in the Litigation and Public Lands Practice Groups at a Denver-based law firm. She gained experience litigating cases involving environmental compliance with federal statutes and natural resources development on public lands. Jenny also has experience in large-scale electronic discovery and title examination.

Jenny earned her B.A. in economics and business from Colorado College. She later went on to receive her J.D. from South Texas College of Law in Houston, Texas where she served as an associate editor of the Corporate Counsel Review.

Jenny is admitted to practice in Texas and Colorado. She is currently an active member of the Houston Young Lawyers Association and the Houston Bar Association. As a former Division I Women's Soccer athlete, Jenny enjoys long-distance running and road biking at parks throughout Houston.
